Quarterly Commentary

The first quarter of the New Year was dominated by rising bond yields and a rotation out of equity growth stocks into value. The announcement of a further US stimulus package and the phenomenal success that the vaccine rollout has enjoyed in the US and in the UK were the two main drivers behind this.

It has now been over a year since the global equity markets collapsed before rallying back, recording their shortest bear market in history; and recent predictions regarding the reopening of the global economy have meant further advancements for risk assets.

Other asset classes – such as commodities – have also benefitted from the potential for global GDP numbers to see significant improvement. The prospects of increased manufacturing demand, China's insatiable appetite for commodities and growing investor interest in sustainable themes have been behind many of their price movements. While overall inflation remains relatively low, the recent rise in commodity prices is beginning to show up in producer price inflation, which is usually good news for the value end of the market. Nevertheless, there are still many good quality growth opportunities in technology and in the green energy sector. Admittedly, some equity valuations do look rather stretched but there is a positive outlook for corporate earnings over the coming months which should support many of those higher valuations.

As lockdowns ease, vaccination programmes continue and central bank policies remain accommodative, the global economy is now expected to strengthen significantly between now and the end of the year. This is likely to create a further positive backdrop for risk assets such as global equities and a broadening out of stock market asset allocations. Covid-19 will doubtless leave an enduring mark on people's lives and on the business community. Just as importantly, the pandemic is predicted to result in the fastest growth in GDP in a generation, as well as catalysing major advances in disruptive technologies and the green revolution – all of which will mean further exciting investment opportunities for the future.

Strategy Commentary

Performances have been mixed across funds over the past quarter: rising government bond yields, a rotation to value and concerns over higher inflation have combined to cause widespread volatility in global markets. The top three performing funds were JPM Global Growth & Income plc (+7.74%), Liontrust Global Dividend (+4.51%) and Evenlode Global Income (+4.39). This performance validates the strategy's more pronounced global focus, pursuing a combination of world-leading companies to drive the portfolio's total return while ensuring they generate sustainable dividend pay-outs. These three funds in particular benefitted from an improved outlook for dividends, as successful vaccination programmes, accommodative central bank policies and stimulus packages all paved the way for a wider global economic recovery.

The worst performing fund was Baillie Gifford Global Discovery (-7.57%), reflecting the slight cyclical rotation to value in global markets. Having performed so well in 2020, many of this fund's holdings remain well-placed to weather market volatility and outperform over the long-term: its experienced management team will continue to seek out the innovative businesses of the future.

Throughout these periods, our investment team will continue to work tirelessly on the portfolio, monitoring the financial markets, contacting fund managers and making investment decisions that we believe will benefit the strategy over the longer term.
